Widening Horizons of African American Literature

Postcolonialism has specifically drawn attention to the intersections of empire, race/ethnicity, gender and class in the workings of global power that reproduce a hierarchical structure. The book introduces how theory of postcolonialism examines societies, governments and people in the formerly colonised regions of the world. The use of 'post' by postcolonial scholars by no means suggests that the effects or impacts of colonial rule are now long gone. Rather, it highlights the impact that colonial and imperial histories still have in shaping a colonial way of thinking about the world and how Western forms of knowledge and power marginalise the non-Western world. Postcolonialism is not only interested in understanding the world as it is, but also as it ought to be. It is concerned with the disparities in global power and wealth accumulation and why some states and groups exercise so much power over others. By raising issues such as this, this book introduces postcolonialism and asks different questions to the other theories and also highlight alternative readings of history, perspectives on contemporary events and issues. Postcolonialism interrogates a world order dominated by major state actors and their domineering interests and ways of looking at the world. It challenges notions that have taken hold about the way states act or behave and what motivates them. By paying close attention to how the aspects of the global play out in specific contexts, the book gives the readers an important and alternative conceptual lens that provides us with a different set of theoretical tools to unpack postcolonial elements in the complexities of this world.

THE ORGANIZING SECRETARY SPEAKS

Dear friends,

South Asian Fiction in English, which was grown over the years in bulk, variety and maturity, has aroused considerable interest both in Asia and the rest of the world.

In fact, the idea expressed by South Asian Novelists are all - pervasive and embarks the entire corpus of Human values. It augurs well that the South Asian novelists are aiming at cardinal human virtues. The purpose of this seminar is to explore the possibility of correspondence and parallelism and highlight the regional and universal aspirations of the people of South Asia.

I express my sincere thanks and indebtedness to the Professors, Research scholars, Students from Andaman, Nicobar Islands, Andhra Pradesh, Kashmir, Kerala, Punjab Puduchery, Tamil Nadu and so on who have contributed their valuable research papers to adorn the seminar. The Research papers on diverse literary creations offer special insight about the writers of South Asian Literature and enlighten our understanding of these literary texts from different critical perspectives.

It is hoped that the critical perspectives on a vast spectrum of literature offered by the research papers in this seminar will inspire the readers to examine literary texts in a variety of ways and enjoy their beautiful dimensions..

Finally, should anyone still feel that South Asian Writers after all cannot match with the rest of the writers in their Potential talent or accomplishment. I can only tell them by the way of whatever the South Asian English Writers do, they are capable to do twice as well as the rest of the world writers to be thought half so good. Luckily it's not difficult.
